

What Professionalization Would Mean for the Cybersecurity Work Force.

A profession arises when any trade or occupation transforms itself through "the development of formal qualifications based upon education, apprenticeship, and examinations, the emergence of regulatory bodies with powers to admit and discipline members, and some degree of monopoly rights. How does this apply to current cybersecurity training and workforce development efforts, and what would it mean if cybersecurity were to be raised to that level?